The Lost and Found.

"I will be ever grateful to the Want Columns for the return of an article of lewelry, an heirloom, that I lost one evening, and which was returned to me the next evening."

You have heard such expressions from many who have had practical experience with the remarkable efficiency of the Want Columns in recovering lost articles. covering lost articles.

great convenience of the Wants in returning lost articles is the fact flast they work so quickly. A few hours after you send your Want Ads to The El Paso Herald, telling of a lost article, thousands of people are reading the Wants, and the losers and finders of lost articles, naturally enough, are the first to make a critical examination of the lost and found classification.

A Mistake to HELP the WEAK?

E pride ourselves upon our modern humanitarian efforts to care for the humanitarian efforts to care for the feeble, protect the defective and make life longer and easier for the aged. But Sir James Barr, the distinguished English scientist, shakes his head and says that all this is a mistaken kindness. Any really, thoughtful person who will study the principles of eugenics-which means the betterment of the human race-will, he asserts, see that much of our modern charity, philanthropy and kindness to the suffering is a mistake.

We have been pursuing a wrong ideal. We have been fighting disease. We have been trying to palliate the sufferings of the hopelessly diseased. We have been recruiting the army of the cancerous and tuberculous. We have been trying to prolong the life of the old and weak. Old age pensions and insurance schemes have ben using up our national resources. We have been giving medical attendance too cheap. The result is that we have loaded the nation with a vast burden of old and diseased persons.

One of the aims of eugenics is to correct that error and to lead the nation back to sound principles. The great object of national life, says Prof. Barr, should not be to accumulate an enormous mass of people, no matter how feeble-just kept alive by science, and including an abnormal number of very old persons enabled to hold on to life for an unnatural long period by extreme care. The object of national life should rather be to have as many powerful, robust, courageous, fighting working people in the prime of life as we can possibly get. Let these people work hard, live well and win a generous livelihood. If they have saved up enough to keep them in comfort for the declining years of life, so much the better for them. If not, let them go to the paupers' grave. Do not use up the national resources in preserving the useless. This may sound cruel, Prof. Barr says, but it is simply obeying the laws of nature. Nature is not humanitarian. Nature is cruel. But if we do not obey her laws

If we persist in squandering our resources in preserving the feeble and sickly we shall be conquered by nations that produce an abundance of vigorous manhood and expend that manhood freely. In fact he fears that the conquest has already been. Therefore, he says, let our first aim be to breed a race of strong, fertile young men and women, and let us think less about preserving the old and sickly.

Politics and Engagement of $2,000,000 for Experts to Paris Forms Scareerow. New York, N. Y., June 24.-The financial district was in a mood of depression today, as reflected in prices. Political conditions seemed to be the cause, but the approach of the midyear settlements, with prospects of strin-gency abroad, contributed to the gen-eral feeling.

gency abroad, contributed to the general feeling.

An engagement of $2,000,000 gold for export to Paris was another indication of the trend of events across the water. Stocks here declined one to two points, with the greatest weakness in Reading. Coppers were heavy on the sharp decline in London.

That center sold moderately in this market at the opening.

Bonds were irregular.

Prices made up ground steadily, and by 2 oclock the list ruled above midway between Saturday closing and the lowest of the forenoon. Lehigh Valley showed exceptional strength and Tobacco issues rose from 16 to 15 points. The market closed heavy. Prices fell back again in the last hour, when Reading declined to within a fraction of its early low. Canadian Pacific also showed renewed weakness.
